Beat inflation

In the current economic climate, contributing more to your RRSP or TFSA could be a very good solution.

Over the long term, the returns generated, the non-essential expenditure avoided and the potential tax savings you can benefit from, multiplied by the number of years you contribute, could help you mitigate the effects of inflation.

Systematic investing (deposits by automatic pre-authorized debit) is by far the best savings approach and yields profitable long-term results.

During periods of volatility, holding on to your investments is often the best strategy!

Based on a $100,000 asset holding, an investor who decided to exit the markets in 2020 and wait for them to start recovering before returning would have lost $22,000 in returns in just 18 months!

The best approach is to stay on track with your savings plan!
